

SKOCH BFSI AWARD 2024

SKOCH is the only organisation that has documented the evolution of digital banking in India since 2000. This has included the efforts historically made by CVC, RBI and banks like SBI, PNB, Corporation Bank, Union Bank, Syndicate Bank, Andhra Bank, Canara Bank and many more, the documentation of which remains rare to date as we have captured the live history of the transition of the banking system in India. Whether it was Branchless Banking at Tineri, Farmers' Training College at Neemrana, SHG Livelihood Linkage at Kalahandi, Mobile Banking at Surendranagar, JLG Banking Linkage at Bichpuri, SKOCH teams of researchers have visited it all. Thus, institutional memory is available in films, documentaries and case studies.

Although bank computerisation started in India with liberalisation in 1991-92 but not until 1998-99, only 5,000 out of 65,000 odd bank branches were computerized. Mr N Vittal, the then Chief Vigilance Commissioner set the target for total bank branch computerisation by March 2000. Lo and behold the target was achieved by February itself. That was the first tryst of banking with digital. India has moved from the days of manual ledgers to ALPM to MICR-based cheque processing called cheque truncation set up by RBI, straight-through processing, core banking, ATMs and so on. What we see today as Digital Banking had its roots dating back to Y2K.

Many of such successes were also honoured with SKOCH Award for having to contribute to nation-building and definitively changing the course of banking in India.

We did not stop there. India has now moved to NEFT, RTGS, IMPS and now UPI. Capturing milestones has become a culture at SKOCH and keeps on adding to the digital knowledge resource for others to take note of and learn from.

India is now going through the second phase of digital or branchless banking and services available on mobile and other devices. The focus is on providing customers with fast, accurate and quality banking experience.

At SKOCH, we are looking at the new generation champions, organisations and their success stories, propelled by the new business models, application of newer technologies and change in culture.

Such successes will become part of the rich knowledge resource, wherein the names of new changemakers will also be etched in history.
